Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

High pressure will start to move off to the east over the next few days. This will bring slightly cooler temperatures to the area and a return of the marine layer. A cooler pattern is expected to persist through the middle of next week.

Medford Weather:

Conditions along western Siskiyou county will begin to improve slightly this morning, but critical fire weather will continue. The thermal trough responsible for producing the dry and warm conditions, as well as steady east winds, will weaken slightly under pressure from an approaching trough from the northwest. This will allow the winds to weaken and provide only slight improvement to the poor overnight recoveries.

Reno Weather:

A warm and mostly dry pattern will continue into the upcoming week. The only exception will be in eastern Lassen County this and Monday afternoon with isolated thunderstorms possible. High temperatures will continue to be in the 90s for the lower elevations with 70s and 80s in the Sierra, with a slight cool down by the end of the week. Afternoon zephyr breezes can be expected each day, with some enhancement Monday and then again toward the end of the work week.

San Francisco Weather:

A benign weather pattern will result in generally dry conditions and temperatures near seasonal averages through early next week. A gradual warming trend is expected for the latter half of the week as high pressure builds off of the west coast.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Hot and dry weather will continue into next weekend.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will continue to move into Central California today bringing drier conditions and continued above normal temperatures through the week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A gradual warming trend is expected for inland areas through early next week as high pressure builds in from the southwest. Slight cooling is possible later next week as a broad trough of low pressure develops to the north. Low clouds and fog will continue across the coastal plain through next week.

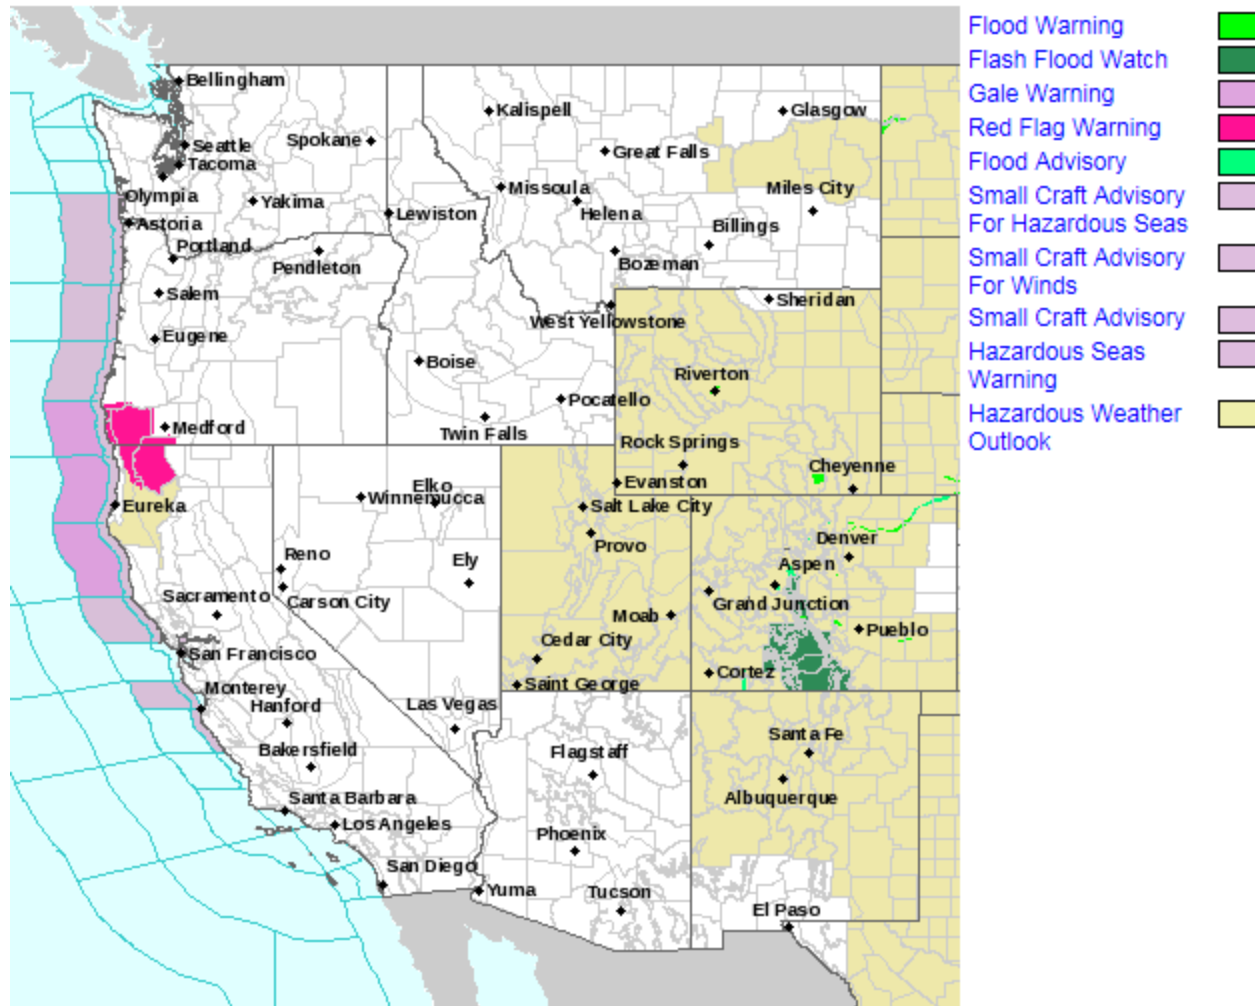

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A deep marine layer will form again tonight west of the mountains with drizzle possible. Unseasonably warm next week beneath an upper level ridge that will build from the south.

Southeast California Weather:

Skies will be sunny with a continued warming trend. Strong high pressure will become situated over the desert southwest this week leading to seasonably hot conditions. Many lower deserts locations will see a prolonged period of temperatures above 110 degrees.
